LETTER FROM WINCONSIN.

Madison, Wis., July 28th, 1877.

Editors Intelligencer:

After the old formula, "thinking that a few lines from a Wheeling boy" in the Badger State would interest some of your readers, I write you at present from the beautiful city of Madison, or "City of Four Lakes," viz: Mendots, Menora, Waubesa and Kegonsa. These lakes, of course, are the chief attraction. The city is pleasantly situated on a peninsula, being nearly surrounded by the two largest of the four lakes. These pretty little lakes are connected by a clear stream of water called Yahora, meaning "The Catfish," Mendots, the largest of the group of lakes, lies on the northwestern portion of the city, being five miles wide and about eight miles in length. This afternoon I visited the State House, and I think a more beautiful site for a and I think a more beautiful site for a city could not be desired. Standing upon the dome of the Capitol, the picture pre-sented is of the most grand and exciting nature. To the northwest, and under your feet, is the lovely lake Meno na, dotted with white sails and tracked by the constant passing to and fro of many little pleasure steamers, ready to convey you across almost any hour in the day, to Winnequah and Lakeside, where

The State House is surrounded by a very pretty park of fourteen acres, with an abundance of shade trees, which make it decidedly an inviting place to the lounger on a July afternoon. On every hand private residences, envoloped with foliage, present themselves from this lofty lookout, seventy feet from the top of the main building. The long avenues bordered with stade trees, afford a mont

I have visited many places of note during this summer in Wisconsin, but I think Madison as the Capital is the pride of the whole State. No other State in the Union has a Capital whose location is so en-chantingly beautiful. I will not except West Virginia and don't want to be sar-"The Lake Side retreat"-with its charming scenery of fairy lakes, "rolling prairies and woodlands," all conspire to make it one of the most attractive sumresorts in the whole Northwest, Here conventions, almost numberless, and of every kind—political, literary and stantly assemble, and here where the best libraries in the State are trated, men of science and literary taste naturally resort. It must always be the favorite watering place, and al-ways remain the Athens of Wisconsin. W. A. II.

A CURIOUS IDEA.

The Loss of Personal Identity-Shull We All be Tattooed?

From the N. Y. Evening Post. When Dan Rice was most popular as a clown it was one of his favorite jests to lament the fact that he was not positive as to his own identity. He had reason, he said, to fear that he was not himself, but was somebody else; that in infancy he had been removed from his cradle and carried away he knew not where, while another baby had been placed in the cra-dle in his stead. "I weep sometimes," he said, 'to think what I may be cuduring said, to think what I may be countring of poverty and wretchedness without knowing it, and I would give anything to know where I am and how I am."

It appears that the clown's lament was not altegether unreasonable. Two cases have attracted attention lately which show how difficult it is for any man to be certain that he is himself. In one of them a man was found dead, and at the inquest held over the body his sons appeared to the control of the contro quest held over the body his sons apeared and swore that the corpse was that of their father. After the man had been buried, and the fact published in the newspapers, he came to New York from his home in New Jersey, and insisted that the was not dead at all, and thus the Coroner was left with two copies of the man, so to speak, on his hands. One of them he had buried, and the other was alive and well.

A land Core of Disease.

Dr. Beard cited two cases of organic disease of the spine which had received desired temporary relief which sitting under the blue glass. The opinion was expressed that works on therapeutics must include man, so to speak, on his hands. One of them he had buried, and the other was alive and well.

The eccond case was still stranger. A suggestions:

uan was taken to a Brooklyn hospital for treatment, and he there registered his name as Robert Morton, of No. 40 Beach street, New York. He related, also, the rather singular story of his hite. After a while his friends began to call upon him, but they agreed in insisting that the him, but they agreed in insisting that the ham an who called himself Robert Morton, by writing them in Latin, had psychology and who cave what they know to be a second the second care what they know to be a second care to make the following psychological substances of patients treating name as Robert Morton, of No. 40 Beach street, New York. This leaves the poor man without name or personal identity, and his case is a hard one. He believed himself to be Robert Morton until otherwise informed, and now he does not know who he is. Unless some friend shall appear who can enlighten him on this point, he must always romain a mystery to himself. In view of these facts it is worth while to ask whether we shall not have to tatioo trademarks upon our bodies for our protection against "base and worthless imitations" with which "unscrupulous rivals" may at any time "flood the market." As an additional precaution against fraud it may be well to continue the tattooing process, illustrating ourselves from time to time with pictures of the principal scenes in our lives, fairly traced in India in un more confirmable and the principal scenes in our lives, fairly traced in India in unon of the principal scenes in our lives, fairly traced in India in unon of the principal scenes in our protection in the complex of the principal scenes in our protection of the principal scenes in the latter wonder and award the protection of the principal scenes in the latter wonder and award the protection of the principal scenes in the latter wonder and award the protection of the principal scenes in the latter wonder and the principal scenes in the latter wonder and award the protection of the principal scenes in the latter wonder and award the protection of the principal scenes in the latter wonder and award the principal scenes in the latter wonder and award the protection of the principal scenes in the latter wonder and the principal scenes in the latter wonder and award the principal scenes in the latter wonder and award the principal scenes in the latter wonder and award the protection and the principal scenes in the latte illustrating ourselves from time to time with pictures of the principal scenes in our lives, fairly traced in India luk upon arms and chest.

When taken apart, Brown's grip was still upon Yount's arm, which had to be loosened by friends forcing open the hands. Both parties were laid upon the platform, a short distance from each other, and five doctors summoned, but no relief could be afforded Brown. While lying thus, Yount, it is said, swore at Brown, and said to him if he could only reach him, that he would soon put him out of the way. Brown died at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, and was buried at Pleasureville Cemetery on Sunday, Yount lingered until Sunday evening, when he, too, died, after suffering great pain. Giddings, July 28.—Lee county is argely woodland growth, being mainly post oak, affording excellent mast for rogs. The prairie portion affords splendid grazing for cattle. Thieves have long inferted portions of the county. The cattle of the prairie have been stolen in large numbers; horses have also been systematically run off by the thieves. It has been impossible to convict the culprits. Their number is so great that they conceal each other and the stolen property, or conveniently prove in court all that is necessary to liberate the guilty. The people, despairing of redress by ordinary process of law, have for some time been engaged in pursuing extraordinary means. Judge Lynch has frequently been appealed to.

About fourteen persons, in the last two or three years, have been hanged or shot by vigilants in Lee county. Some were taken out of jail, some caught at their homes, and the latest haul was made from a dancing party at a private house, where in large numbers; horses have also been

The people of the house were afraid to venture out until next morning, when they found their late guests, stark and cold, swinging by their necks from post oak limbs. As the young men were being carried out by their masked captors they repeatedly called out to the girls they had been dancing with to come out and see them hanged. They knew their fate. The particulars are as follows:

Commissioners of washington, arrived in St. Paul, bringing with them 100,000 in St. Paul in Shelby county, both parties being killed. The particulars are as follows:

Daniel Brown, who was a local reporter for the Shelby Sentinel, two weeks ago buriesqued through the Sentinel a young, er brother of Yount's, who had had a fight with a younger Perry—both boys being under fifteen years of age. Saturday evening John Yount, the buriesqued boy, met Mr. Brown at Cropper's, and taking him saide, asked him something in regard to the article in the Sentinel tory, John Yount expressed his boylan indignation at Brown, who resented by alapping Johnny over, and walked oil. John reported the affair to his older brother, Byron, who espoused his quarrer, and during the evening he and Brown passed some high words. Each knowing the other's disposition well, and being STOUT, ABLE-BODIED MEN, they parted and prepared themselves for the next meeting. Brown borrowed a little four-shot pistol from his friend, James Edwards, and Yount, after seeking in vain for a weapon, finally forced himself into Alexander's store, and took a pistol from the private drawer.
